THE NEW ENGLAND HORSE MURDER—DETAILS OF THE CRUEL AFFAIR.—The Boston Post gives the following particulars of the late atrocious attempt to trot a horse from that city to Portland, Maine, between sunrise and sunset, a distance of 116 miles:

The animal was a black gelding, large and thin in flesh, weighing some 1,000 pounds, about 16 hands high, was a little over 10 years of age and was raised in Maine. Since the race was arranged it has excited a good deal of speculation among horsemen in this city and vicinity, and considerable money has been wagered on the result, those well acquainted with the endurance of the animal being perfectly willing to invest their stamps in his favor.

The horse was to go in harness, and it was expressly stipulated that he should travel the old stage road to Forest City, the distance being computed to be 116 miles. The attempt to drive a horse this distance in a single day over a rough road is, we believe, unprecedented, although several noted matches against time are fresh in our memory. Two or more horses in this country have accomplished the feat of trotting 20 miles in one hour, and a few years since a man undertook to drive a horse 100 miles in 10 hours, in one of the Long Island racing courses. Every arrangement was made that the race might go off entirely smooth and fair. To provide against missing the road, a man was sent ahead in a light gig, which was ready for his use if he should break his own, the pilot making frequent changes of horses on the road.

Other parties also accompanied the horse to see fair play for the money they had staked. The tolls on the bridges were also paid in advance, that there might be no unnecessary delay in that score. At 4½ o'clock on Wednesday morning the horse was started on his journey, Frank Briggs, a well known turfite, holding the ribbons over him. The point of departure was Fitchburg Railroad depot, on Causeway street, at which place were congregated quite a number of interested parties, to see the start, including one man who held an almanac in his hand, to make a sure thing as to the time the sun rose. The horse reached Newburyport, one third of the distance, in four hours, in good condition, although we understand for the first few miles he required considerably. A stop of fifteen minutes was made at Newburyport, and Portsmouth was reached at 10½ o'clock. Here the animal was taken out, unharnessed, rubbed down and fed.

At 12.10 Mr. Briggs again took his seat in the sulky and a start was made, the horse, to all appearances, in excellent condition. Saco was reached at 4.30, P. M., and a rest of fifteen minutes taken. As the hour approached when the horse was to arrive in Portland, considerable interest was manifested and quite a crowd of people gathered in front of the Preble House, the point at which the race was to terminate. As time passed on it began to be considered doubtful if the horse would pull through, and at 7 o'clock it was reported that the horse had given out, which in a short time was corroborated by persons who went out on the road—that the horse in coming over the Scarborough Turnpike had dropped to the ground and died shortly after. There were several reports in the city yesterday in regard to the cause of failure, the most general seeming to be that the animal was not properly fed on the journey. At any rate we hope it will be a long time before a similar feat is attempted.

RAILROADS IN PEACE-TIME.—These are times of surprises. When Lee surrendered Wall street was full of pity for the condition of the Northern railroads, which had grown prosperous during the war, but which, it was universally assumed, were to be re-plunged by peace into the old non-dividend-paying condition. From 1859 to 1864 the business of the roads had more than doubled. This, every-body said, was the fruit of the war—the transportation of soldiers, military supplies, etc., etc. We all saw that when peace came again and there were no more soldiers to be moved, and no more guns and food to be carried to Washington for Government, traffic on the railroads would decline to the old figures, and railroad dividends would again resemble "angels' visits."

Lee surrendered on the 9th of April, and within a fortnight from that date the disbandment of the troops and the reduction of the navy began. By the end of May a large reduction in the army and in the movement of military supplies had been effected. Yet the traffic returns for June show an average increase over last year of 30 or 40 per cent. Instead of falling back to the old figures which were current before the war, railroad receipts are far in excess of those of the most active period of the war—of the period when Government was moving men and material with sleepless activity, and when grain was at so high price that it could afford to pay almost any freight that railway managers asked.

This is an astounding fact—one for which, we venture to say, not one among the best-informed railroad men or Wall street financiers was prepared. It has taken the profession and the street alike by surprise. Allowing for every special reason which can be assigned—for the return of disbanded troops, for Western fairs, for a sudden outburst of pleasure travel, and all such influences—the June traffic on our leading lines of railway must remain an utterly incomprehensible anomaly to those who still believe, as every body once believed, that the great receipts of 1863 and 1864 were the fruit of the war, and that when the cause ceased to operate the effect would cease also.

We are forced, in spite of preconceived theories, to seek, outside of the direct effect of the war, for the cause of the great development of internal trade which commenced in 1861, and which seems to be going on still, after the peace, with unabated vigor. And the closer the subject is analyzed the clearer will it appear that this traffic—if it be maintained—must be ascribed to the effect of Mr. Chase's paper money issues, which, by supplying capital in abundance, facilitated the development of resources previously dormant, and called into productive activity every interest and every section of the country. Bad as the effects of the issues of the legal tenders were in one respect, and severe as must be the crisis preceding their redemption in coin, they rendered at least this service—they furnished the country with what it needed most—capital. may this account for the increase of 100 per cent. in our internal trade in four years? There is one fact which tends strongly to confirm this view. The great railroad war of 1859 between the New York Central, the Erie, the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore and Ohio, was waged for through freight. There was not freight enough going to and coming from the West to keep all the four trunk lines anything like busy; competition arose, rates were cut down, and at least two of the roads were nearly bankrupted in the fight. Now not one of these four lines is anxious about through freight. The New York roads profess, we believe truly—to make no profit on it. Both the Erie and the Central are being sued by scores of people who claim damages because the roads would not or could not, or at least did not, carry their through freight in due time. The fact was and is that both lines have so much local business—which has almost wholly sprung up since 1861—that they have but little rolling stock disengaged for through traffic. The Erie, which once ran through a wilderness, can now live and pay dividends without carrying a pound of through freight, or a single Chicago passenger.

If it be admitted that the largely increased railway traffic of 1863, '64 and '65 was the fruit of increased development of resources and increased production, it will follow that no material diminution in that traffic need be apprehended under altered circumstances, and the corollary, as far as railroad dividends and the value of railroad property are concerned, is too obvious to need explanation.—Harper's Weekly.

Trade Combinations in San Francisco

[illegible] made in the col[illegible] paper to the fact that the trade of [illegible] entirely under the [illegible] jobbers in San Francisco, [illegible] enormous wealth [illegible] to the moral honesty of the means they [illegible] out their league. A little attention to the phenomena which our trade exhibits will be quite sufficient to establish a perfect conviction of the correctness of this statement. It is [illegible] that there should be so many irregularities and anomalies in the system of prices were the matter not under the management of those who, by artificial regulations, are controlling trade and causing the fluctuations [illegible]. In San Francisco, and indeed the entire Pacific coast (since all our traffic [illegible] the one great [illegible]), prices are evidently not governed by the regular laws of trade which prevail in other great commercial communities. The unsteadiness, the apparent caprice, the want of uniformity in market [illegible] San Francisco, show us conclusively as need be, that a large, powerful and wealthy combination not only exists there, but that it is constantly at work. Evidences of its existence are perfectly clear. The market reports of San Francisco render its operations quite apparent. In other large cities competition regulates trade; in San Francisco the precisely opposite system prevails. A combination there controls everything, and we see the fruits of its workings in the high prices which are still maintained.

In the East the cessation of hostilities was succeeded by a speedy decline in the prices of almost all sorts of commodities. This reduction is still going on. In a short time, as things are now tending, the last remnants of war prices in the East will have disappeared. Not so on the Pacific coast. While the war lasted the rise in the price of goods here kept pace with, or rather exceeded the rate of increase of prices in the East, but now when the war is over, the decline in the Atlantic States is not succeeded by a similar reduction of prices here. On the contrary, commodities of all kinds, except those we produce for ourselves, are steadily rising in price under the manipulations of the jobbers of San Francisco.

It was perfectly well known long ago, that the importers and dealers of San Francisco were causing prices here to be kept up to as high a rate in gold as the same goods were sold at in New York, where a depreciated paper currency is the medium of exchange. Goods bought in the East for paper have, for the most part, been sold by the San Francisco importers for just as many dollars in gold—with freights and profits added—as they cost in the New York market. The result of these transactions has been to enrich those who were and are still engaged in them. The loss of course has fallen upon the consumer, who has been compelled to pay those extortionate prices. Herein is to be seen the great reason why everything on the Pacific coast outside of San Francisco, is languishing just as if a blight had fallen upon all the interests and enterprises of the country. Industry has been, as it still is too severely taxed by the extortion of the monopolists, to permit the people at large to prosper as they should do. This is no imaginary cause of complaint. The high prices which are inflicted upon us are directly traceable to the action of the combination in San Francisco. It is the business of the persons thus associated to keep prices up, and they will do it so long as the people will submit to this grievous imposition.

Capital, in order to be made of use to the country at large, should be kept in competition with itself. When capitalists form combinations for the sake of unusual gains they cease to be a help to a country, and become, instead, an oppressive burden upon it. The money of San Francisco is not employed in such a manner as to build up the interests of these States, but because the avarice of its owners is not held in check by competition it is used to the detriment of all save themselves. We can escape from the control of this combination if we try. For a long time past, as we have frequently shown, it has been growing rich by the practice of injustice towards us. We must begin to import for ourselves, since those who now do it for us will persist in dealing so very unfairly with our people.

TAXING THE MINES.—No method of taxing the mines that has yet been suggested, seems to meet the general approval of the people who are engaged in working them. Many miners, very unwisely and illiberally as we think, are somewhat indignant at the proposition to assess any tax whatever either upon the mines or their products. Now these lands belong to the Government, the same as do other parts of our national domain, and it is impossible to assign any valid reason why they may not rightfully be taxed just as other species of property are. If they are to be exempt from taxation, the exception must rest not upon the claim that the Government has no right to levy a tax of this kind, but upon considerations which urge the impolicy of the measure.

But it is very certain that the mines will be taxed in some form or other. The least objectionable method seems to be to require as is now done a certain per centum of the gold and silver actually produced and assayed to be paid to the Government. True this tax though assessed at the assay office or the mint, falls ultimately upon the miner, but the amount which has to be paid is certain and specific, and the miner is not annoyed by an assessment made immediately upon himself. Governments of late have exercised much ingenuity and evinced much wisdom in providing such methods for the collection of revenue as will serve to keep out of the minds of their people the idea that they are paying taxes at all.

The law now in force which provides for the assessment of a tax on precious metals when assayed will probably be amended by the next Congress. The principle of the present law which taxes the products of the mines rather than the mines themselves, is the correct one, and if another law be substituted for the one now in force, the present principle of indirect taxation will probably still be adhered to.

The plan of selling the mines, which was proposed in the last Congress, will hardly be revived [illegible]. It is probable that a law may be passed giving mining lands to companies, the same as agricultural lands are given to settlers. This would lead to [illegible] in mining titles and free the [illegible] of much trouble and embarrassment. The whole question will certainly come before Congress at its next session. The mines are to be taxed in some way, and the system which is least objectionable ought to be secured.

A VICIOUS REBEL.—The rebel Professor Mc[illegible], though now imprisoned at Washington, is the [illegible] who prepared the inflammable compound intended to destroy Northern cities. When the rebellion broke out and for nearly two years thereafter he was Professor of Chemistry in Columbia [illegible], New York. About the beginning of the year 186[illegible] he suddenly removed to Richmond [illegible] one of the bitterest of all the rebels [illegible] States. His incarceration is a source of great satisfaction to those of the North who know him.

Governor Edgerton of Montana has issued a call for [illegible] men for sixty days to protect the [illegible] and chastise the Indians.

All the emigration [illegible] this way, as [illegible] about twenty miles [illegible]. Quite a number of wagons [illegible] a large train of one hundred wagons is expected in a few days. I [illegible] that any emigration is coming by the [illegible] south [illegible] though some came that way last summer [illegible] them then. The emigration this summer is very largely from Iowa. [illegible] generally [illegible] Iowa [illegible] Oregon, very few stopping [illegible] their fortunes in Idaho. Quite a number last fall stopped in this valley, where the soldiers are now camped, and on the road in other places, but the unusually severe winter proved most disastrous to them. Their stock all died, and spring found them poor and destitute. [illegible] longer. Those went below also I believe, and the prospect is that Oregon will receive during the present season a heavy addition to its population, while some express an intention of settling in Washington Territory.

This valley was last winter covered with snow to the depth of six or eight feet, and Mr. Hunton, who wintered here most of the time alone, describes it as dreary and dismal in the extreme. However such seasons are unfrequent, and while snow always lies on [illegible] more or less, it is easy to lay in abundant feed in a country which has miles square of the most beautiful and luxuriant natural meadow. I am satisfied, upon further observation, that this country in the not distant future is bound to be settled and cultivated, as its soil is of unsurpassed fertility, and the dry prairie is covered with an abundant and heavy growth of grass that promises well for wheat. Along the edge of the hills springs are constantly running down answering for irrigation, and save that timber is only to be had at a distance [illegible] to twelve miles, I can see no fault to be found. The summers are beautiful [illegible] this weather [illegible] and the seasons are long enough to secure favorable crops. The nights are warmer than in the Willamette, and I enjoy sleeping out of doors more than inside of a house. There is no farming attempted here, the only settlement being by those who desire to make or are cutting hay for a business. My friend Hunton is at present the only householder and resident of Volcano, while across the prairie eight miles distant and plainly in sight is a hay cutting ranch. About ten miles back on the road towards Little Camas prairie lives John Sexton, an old Oregonian, one of those who broke the [illegible] of 1844. He finds a dry climate necessary to his health, and has planted his stakes here, though owning a farm in the Molalla prairie. He is one of the native born mountaineers and appears happy and contented where most men would find life [illegible] and intolerable, away from all that constitutes society and home.

VOLCANO MINES.

The Volcano mining district is situated in a mountain range lying between the waters of the Malade river, which runs easterly for sixty miles, and Snake river, which runs northwesterly. The ledges are near the Malade valley, running down the foot hills and [illegible] well grassed mound like hills. During the few days I have been here we have coursed extensively over the mountains and prairies, and a pleasanter country to ride over I have never seen. For grazing purposes it cannot be excelled, and the value to the mines of the pasturage and farming land near it goes far to make this a most eligible mining region, even if timber is somewhat distant. Within five miles of the ledges are to be found excellent groves of fir and pine, while across the valley towards South Boise it exists in unlimited quantities.

Volcano contains quartz in abundance. The ledges are larger and better defined than any I have seen. Some of them actually crop out like high walls. The formation is granite, as are all the quartz districts of Idaho, and the ledges invariably show the presence of mineral, [illegible] showing traces of copper visible, and others being rich in argentiferous galena. Assays have been made from many ledges showing [illegible] exaggerated returns, but in many cases proving the existence of gold and silver in paying quantities, which is [illegible] as the ledges are well and show an entire body of ore of the same character, not having in each a small rich vein, as is the case in many ledges of prominence. The opinion of Volcano impresses [illegible] and the conviction remains that these quartz mines are well worth the attention of capitalists, and the expenditure of enough capital to develop them thoroughly. [illegible] they remain almost unimproved, and few ledges have been worked upon. The miners [illegible] last year when the excitement [illegible] of the district was at its height, and more were busily prospecting here [illegible] passed an ordinance that 10 feet sunk on each claim should be considered $100 worth of work, as required by law. The granite of these hills is peculiarly soft and is so easily worked that a pick and shovel is only required to dig into it [illegible] the [illegible] to be found on each ledge [illegible] the fortunate [illegible] dug thereon with all his might. It is astonishing how many of them worked out their 10 feet by the ledge [illegible] while the ledges crop out independently enough, and have only [illegible] in relation [illegible]. Several ledges have been sunk on with good success, and it is to be regretted that the miners have not [illegible] their work [illegible] a manner as to show what the ledges contain as well as with a view to securing a legal possession of them. As it is, the work has been done with [illegible] effect, legal perhaps, but [illegible] answering to satisfy purchasers.

Mr. Hunt [illegible] on the way across the plains [illegible] arrive and be created here. It is [illegible] expected that that will make a favorable report and give a deserved prominence to Volcano. The [illegible] here is unlike any I am familiar with, but its appearance is favorable, and the tests already made show well for it.

There are several persons here lately come from South Boise and Yuba, and they express themselves as delighted with [illegible] change of the rough mountains and [illegible] gulches of those districts for the pleasant prospects that greet the eye, and the smooth hills that invite the prospector here in the county [illegible].

LIFE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

There is an agreeable freedom about mountain life, and an absence from conventional restraint for a while [illegible] but it must be [illegible] a summer pleasure than the [illegible] of the whole year round, and life, society and civilization have an additional zest from having been awhile absent from them. Of all the mountain spots I have seen this summer [illegible] the most attractive [illegible] and [illegible] are not to be seen, still there is little of barrenness about us. The hills and valleys are carpeted with verdure [illegible] and a pleasing [illegible] the universal [illegible] flowers upon hill and plain in profusion that sometimes lends a fragrance to the air as well as charms the eye. We have game in [illegible] and wild fruits, the latter in profusion.

There are [illegible] on the hills prairie chickens upon the prairie, and water fowl upon the river, so that the [illegible] fowling piece made [illegible] our [illegible] secures game enough [illegible] every meal for [illegible] the [illegible] fat and [illegible] chicken [illegible] fishing [illegible] brought with [illegible] variety. One of [illegible] mountain life, wood craft and Indian expedients [illegible] to [illegible] lunch [illegible] can be made palatable by [illegible] limbs from a willow and a little [illegible] cooking utensils, but we have sumptuous lunches [illegible].

[illegible] volcano [illegible] an agreeable change especially as any party [illegible] dirt, but has a supply of provisions laid in to make variety. We have even vegetables imported from Boise City, some seventy-five miles distant, and with the aid of the fowling piece we live [illegible] to [illegible] growing [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] are tending [illegible] when well prospected will [illegible] to future hunters for profit [illegible] a [illegible] of wealth to swell the [illegible].

I shall certainly [illegible] the [illegible] in the coast [illegible] Boise and [illegible] quartz. May it prove [illegible].

DEATH OF [illegible] L. JONES.—By Express from South [illegible] we are informed of the death of [illegible] L. Jones, at Rocky Bar, Alturas county, Idaho, on the 10th inst., after a short illness, of congestion of the [illegible] fever. During his [illegible] he was [illegible] called. First as Express Messenger for Tracy & Co., when with Low Day they made alternate trips weekly, on foot, over the snow and ice to the Dalles, and afterwards as the pioneer Expressman [illegible] they will remember him as always faithful, reliable and honest, always good natured and fond of a joke. West [illegible] will remember his grand father, Horatio [illegible], with Col. [illegible] were the first settlers [illegible] called the Big [illegible] Reservation now known [illegible] Valley, [illegible] of that portion of the [illegible] good nature and benevolence made him [illegible] while his perseverance [illegible] and in [illegible] will was a good record of his antecedents. [illegible] that the fraternity of Odd Fellows buried Mr. [illegible] the and honors of that Order and that [illegible] on the ledges in the vicinity of Rocky Bar [illegible] houses closed, in order that respect might [illegible] the last sad ceremonies over his remains. This [illegible] in the East, may be some small comfort to [illegible] the estimation in which their Brother and relative [illegible] for this country.

[illegible] OF GRAND RONDE VALLEY.—A former [illegible] of this city writing from La Grande under date of August 20th, says the crop of wheat and oats in the Grand Ronde Valley this year is abundant and the quality of the grain is equal to the best in the world. Barley [illegible] there is decidedly good, and he saw 100 bushels [illegible] produced from an acre in certain portions of the valley. The frame for the steam flouring mill of Messrs. [illegible] & Wilkinson was raised on the 19th, and it was thought the mill would be completed in time sufficient [illegible] several thousand bushels of grain the present [illegible]. The farmers were busy in harvesting their crops [illegible] correspondent pictures a lovely scene from the [illegible], imagining himself upon the evergreen and [illegible] mountains, watching the process of the [illegible] in the well filled and ripening grain fields. [illegible] this city were at LaGrande superintending the [illegible] of the mill. Prospects there are [illegible] the people there for the coming fall and winter. A new silver lead had recently been discovered on Grand Ronde river not far from the valley.

A GOOD COMPANY.—Quartz mills and quartz mines are [illegible] established in the country just now that it is not a matter of great surprise that we occasionally [illegible] one of them. In fact we cannot now count the [illegible] in the mines. At Tracy & Co.'s assay office [illegible] we found a brick of $1,800 value, recently made from the mill of the Elkhorn Company [illegible] ledge, in the vicinity of Pioneer City. We [illegible] of the Elkhorn, and were informed that [illegible] good ledge. The rock averages $50 to the [illegible] stamp mill has been at work up [illegible] time. The operations of the company [illegible] conducted very quietly and they are realizing [illegible] from the investment. Mr. W. H. Chapman [illegible] of this city, is Secretary of the company. [illegible] the rock from this ledge one would not consider [illegible] great value, but closer inspection reveals the [illegible] in all sides of a specimen. The ledge [illegible] five feet thickness and every ton will aver[illegible].

[illegible]—Mr. Monastes returned to this city yesterday from the mouth of [illegible] where the Dredger is at work. The snags [illegible] at that point have all been removed. The [illegible] most in the way of vessels measured at [illegible] a half feet, with an immense root and [illegible] fifty feet long, of straight white fir [illegible] channel, in thirty-two feet of [illegible] has been sent for to give the bearings of [illegible] order that the scoop may be put to work [illegible] that in a few days at most the channel [illegible] enough to admit of the uninterrupted [illegible] vessels. The shoalest place [illegible] about eleven feet at this time and as we [illegible] by masters of vessels the distance [illegible] does not exceed half a ship's length.

[illegible] AT OWYHEE.—A letter from John [illegible] Ruby City, Aug. 17th, speaks thus of the [illegible] the "Trook & Jennings." We are [illegible] Trook & Jennings by shaft and tunnel. The [illegible] at the south line of the Discovery and [illegible] along the lode 300 feet south to where [illegible] the shaft at a depth of 25 feet. It is [illegible] the work until the shaft and tunnel [illegible]. Our shaft is now down 14 feet. The [illegible] every day as it goes down. About [illegible] day are taken out—four men working with [illegible] 800 per ton. The returns I sent [illegible] at the Baker mill gives a product of $9,000. The [illegible] certainly the most promising lode in [illegible] and I believe in the United States. Our [illegible] is the best on the ledge lying on the side of [illegible], the south end of the claim being [illegible] higher than the north end.

[illegible] FANNIE PATTON.—The People's Transportation [illegible] launched at Canemah a new [illegible] of the Upper Willamette. The [illegible] the Fannie Patton. She is to [illegible] the place of the popular old steamer [illegible] the same engines, 16¾ inch cylinders. The new steamer is 130 feet long [illegible] hold. She was built under the [illegible] Capt. Dochran, by John Thomas [illegible] will be superior to any boat that has yet [illegible] the [illegible] above the Falls. Her [illegible] will be greater than that of any boat [illegible] upper river, and yet she will draw but [illegible] of water.

[illegible] ACADEMY.—The Directors of the [illegible] and Female Seminary have concluded [illegible] for the re-opening of the Institution on the first week of September, under the supervision of Mr. [illegible] Sayre, as Principal. The department teachers will [illegible] on Monday next [illegible]. Mr. Sayre is a very [illegible] teacher, and it is a matter of congratulation to the Trustees and the public that they have secured so able a Principal. We bespeak for the school a liberal patronage in the future [illegible].

PEACHES AND VEGETABLES.—This city is just now [illegible] supplied with [illegible] at very reasonable prices [illegible] apples are about [illegible] a first rate article [illegible] cents per bushel [illegible].

NEW AUCTION ROOMS.—[illegible] have opened an Auction and Commission House at [illegible] door north of Knapp, Burr [illegible] the [illegible] furniture of [illegible] The public are [illegible] call for bargains in their line.

[illegible]—Cohn & Bishel have removed their stock of boots and shoes to the store No. 111 Front street, which was expressly fitted up for that purpose and have made large additions in the line of clothing and gentlemen's [illegible] goods. See advertisement.

I. O. of G. T.—There will be a regular meeting of Multnomah Lodge, No. 1, at the [illegible] Hall this evening at [illegible] o'clock. A punctual attendance is requested.

By order of W. C. T.

Gov. Murphy of Arkansas reports a frightful state of affairs in that State. He charges the rebel [illegible] with permitting their troops to disband themselves before their surrender so that they have scattered themselves in every direction taking arms and ammunition, plundering and robbing without discrimination. There is much [illegible] in the State.

PUSHING WESTWARD.—The great railroad thoroughfare will soon be completed westward as far as Lawrence, Kansas.

Letter from Canyon City

CANYON CITY, Aug. 22, 1865.

EDS. OREGONIAN:

Were it not for the fact that I have long been [illegible] and therefore am in a measure [illegible] reason for writing besides a mere promise on [illegible] I should [illegible] write at this time even though I had something [illegible] for Canyon [illegible] newspaper [illegible].

[illegible] things [illegible] known to [illegible] as the "mountain fever," [illegible] made its appearance early last spring, and its ravages have not yet closed, though happily it is somewhat erratic in its movements and has not to my knowledge in a single instance attacked any person outside the [illegible] in which it first appeared. Indeed the malady has thus far confined itself to the members of [illegible]. [illegible] symptoms as I am told [illegible]. As the disease is one with which all newspaper [illegible] acquainted, I will not trouble you with a minute diagnosis [illegible].

QUARTZ.

The quartz excitement has not run so high in these parts as it did some time ago, owing in part to the natural tendency of [illegible] on the first touch of the [illegible] object that they can possibly remind [illegible] but principally to the [illegible] of the places [illegible] when it first [illegible] everything [illegible] no [illegible] inclination to speculation upon quartz. But I would not have you infer that the quartz business has been abandoned. There are some enterprising gentlemen engaged in the business of prospecting those mountains for quartz, who have shown themselves to be proof against placer [illegible]. Dr. Morrison, Mr. Tabor and some others have through the entire season kept an eye out to the development of the quartz interests of this county, and I am satisfied the sequel will demonstrate that they have not labored in vain. Some of the ledges which their industry has brought to light I have mentioned in my former letters. Some I have not mentioned. The Ruckle ledge is probably one of the richest in this region. It is of recent discovery, and is situate on the divide country between Lake creek and Granite, and about fifteen miles north west of the Olive creek mines. It is a silver ledge. Its width at the top of the ground is ten feet, and it has been distinctly traced a distance of three miles. I have seen specimens of rock from this ledge, and consider them as fine appearing as any I have seen from Idaho or Nevada. There has been no assay of this rock, but it is the intention of the owners of the ledge, to have it thoroughly tested at an early day.

The Blue Mountain ledge is another new discovery. It lies twelve miles west of Olive creek. It is a silver ledge, eighteen inches in width at the top, and has already been traced one mile and a half. An assay of this ledge made at the Dalles produced $1 [illegible] to the ton of rock. Whether the ore assayed was an average specimen of the ledge, I am not prepared to state, but if the average is but one tenth as rich, the ledge is certainly valuable.

The Van Harman ledge is also a silver ledge. It is situate on the north fork of John Day river, about twelve miles north of the village of Independence. An assay of the rock from the ledge shows about $600 to the ton. The Van Harman is four feet wide at the top, and has been traced about half a mile.

The Phil Sheridan is a well defined ledge, said to be rich in gold and silver. It is on Granite creek, at the head of Day's Flat, above Independence. Many consider it one of the best ledges in the county.

The Granite is also a well defined ledge, discovered by Mr. Gallagher, about eight miles above Independence on Granite creek. The top rock of this ledge assays $205 39 in silver, and a small amount of gold. This assay is from Tracy & King of your own city.

Four hundred yards from the Granite is the Olive, discovered by Messrs. Gallagher and Barnes. An assay of the rock from this ledge, made by Tracy & King, as I am informed by Mr. Gallagher himself, shows $437 60 in silver, and $60 in gold to the ton. If you or your readers who are acquainted with quartz, could only see some of the rock from these ledges, you would at once be convinced that this part of the State contains untold wealth which only waits for energy and capital to bring it into actual circulation. I feel that I am speaking that which good reason sustains, when I say that Grant county alone has as much good quartz in it as the Boise Basin. I wish we had more population here; we would then prove to you that we have been guilty of no exaggeration in what we have lately claimed for our part of the State of Oregon. There is no reasonable doubt that in five years from to-day these mountains will be peopled as densely as any other portion of the State, and when that time comes Eastern Oregon will pour such wealth into the laps of her people as shall surprise the world; but these things must necessarily require time. Placer mines may be opened in a few weeks and without capital; to open quartz mining requires time and money.

CINNABAR.

Another important discovery has been made by Dr. Morrison, to-wit: a cinnabar vein. This is about six miles from Olive Creek, in a southeasterly direction. The Doctor has traced this vein two miles, and is of the opinion that it is quite extensive. He is an old miner as well as chemist, and, probably, as well versed in such matters as any other mineralogist in the county.— He says, from the indications furnished by the rock at the top of the vein, he is confident that it is rich. If this should prove to be a paying vein, it will save a large amount of money to the State, as the miners are compelled to use a great deal of quicksilver.

INDIANS.

We are having a season of comparative quietness just now, so far as the Indians are concerned. Nearly a month has elapsed since the last depredations were committed in this valley. What with Captain Small on the one side of us, and Captain Williams on the other, we feel a little more secure than heretofore, but it is certain that the present forces in this country are wholly inadequate to furnish that protection which the infant settlements throughout this part of the State demand. Although we are temporarily enjoying rest from the outrages of the savage, our repose is not altogether without disturbance, for one district is infested by a band of and bogus gold dust operators, who are scarcely less annoying than the Indians. A few weeks ago a man called John Scott and another known as John Hill, came into these parts sporting a large quantity of gold dust. After spending a few days here they purchased some of the best horses in the neighborhood, and left. As soon as they were well out of reach, the person who had sold them the horses bethought himself that there might be something wrong about the matter, so he put his gold dust to the test, whereupon it all turned out to be galvanized lead. The job had been so perfectly done that no eye could have detected the swindle, and even acids were sometime in disclosing it. The Sheriff of this county sent after the villains, and they were overtaken at Butter Creek in Umatilla county. Pursuit was made, and the chase lasted a whole day, during which the thieves had to leave one of their horses and their blankets, but they finally made good their escape.

On last Thursday night six mules were stolen from a teamster, within a mile and a half of Canyon City. They were traced over the mountains southward, but were not overtaken. The thieves were doubtless white men, as the tracks accompanying were those of persons wearing boots. I do not know whether there will be any further efforts to apprehend the fellows or not.

SUNDAY LAW.

[illegible] the people of this highly moral metropolis, [illegible] on a level [illegible] her own choosing, and gave her battle. At the close [illegible] was certainly worsted —many supposed her dead. But last week she revived and made another dash upon the city. Her forces were [illegible] however, this time and she retreated [illegible] with all a light [illegible]. Some think the war is closed. But I am not so sanguine. I [illegible] that Oregon legislators will see the folly of attempting to legislate upon such matters [illegible] districts. Such laws may do well enough in old and well regulated society, but they are entirely [illegible] morally and financially in mining camps. They only create discord and strife without accomplishing any of the ends for which they are designed.

THE NEW ROAD.

Last week our citizens were thrown into a feverish excitement by the intelligence that the people of the Dalles had determined to cut a road from their city direct to the Middle Fork mines, and thus leave Canyon City quite out of the line of travel. Immediately a meeting was called, and the principal men of this place were ready to enter into an obligation not to trade another dollar with Dalles merchants in case such a road was opened by them. Meanwhile drovers and sundry persons, part of them from the Dalles, arrived in town. They had just passed over the country from Dalles to Middle Fork, and reported the route utterly impracticable. This was the [illegible]. In the [illegible] I all thought [illegible] following, [illegible] our Dalles friends [illegible] quietly to [illegible] work again [illegible] that our Canyon [illegible].

[illegible]

The weather [illegible] for the last few months [illegible] the way of [illegible] to escape the heat and recuperate their energies. Last week [illegible] party [illegible] for the Dix [illegible] party of ladies and gentlemen [illegible] to the mountains north [illegible] another party starts into the Dixie region. They all appear to enjoy themselves exceedingly catching trout, shooting birds and gathering whortleberries. So [illegible] we are [illegible].

Not quite so pleasant [illegible] circumstance just brought to light yesterday. A man named Philips living at Marysville was discovered to be whipping his wife. Parties endeavored to [illegible] but were [illegible] the house. The beating was discontinued, but the parties kept guard around the premises until a warrant could be procured for the husband's arrest. This was [illegible] and [illegible] the Sheriff [illegible] and the woman beaten almost to death. The brute is to have an examination to-day.

Reciprocity and the Detroit Convention

Correspondence of the New York Tribune.

HAMILTON, July 1st. Notwithstanding the marked [illegible] of the principal journals to be little the growth of annexation feeling, they are [illegible] its existence. The subject was tabooed in their columns as long as possible, but it has grown larger and nevertheless, and I have now before me a pile of clippings from the east and west bearing unwilling testimony to the [illegible] of a movement which they neither [illegible].

There always has been a great deal of hypocrisy [illegible]. The loyalty of colonists is [illegible] more pretentious than that of the people of the parent state, and our politicians have found it expedient to talk of undying devotion to British connection. Off the stump and out of the Legislature a few of these gentlemen have for years past made merry over the [illegible] which they have turned to their own account. And it is the same with many of the newspapers. When they allude to annexation in their columns it is in the raw-head and bloody bones style, as something too scandalous to be mentioned in polite society, and too dreadful to be handled with the freedom and courtesy usually accorded to important questions. Out of their sanctums many of these public instructors do not hesitate to admit the untenableness of the position which colonial flunkeyism for the time compels them to occupy.

Of an argument against annexation there is literally none. Not the most blatant loyalist has essayed to convince his readers that severance from Britain and union with the States would be detrimental to their interests. No one has ventured an effort to show that the change would be other than beneficial as well to owners of property as to the producing interests of the Province. True, the inquiry has been gravely propounded, "Would annexation prevent short crops or protect the farmer against the weevil?" forgetting that British connection, however sacred, has not saved the Province from either of these evils. Aside from some wise query of this kind, I cannot recall a point bearing the semblance of an argument. And yet much has been written, and is being written, against annexation, but all of it amounts to nothing more than an appeal to national pride and prejudice. "Cease to be Britons!" "Never! Become Americans!" "Preposterous!" By way of emphasizing the horrors of the change, we are reminded that with annexation will come a new series of school histories, depriving George the Third of his sanctity and George the Fourth of his virtue, speaking respectfully of George Washington, and generally inculcating the idea that there are other civilized countries than England, and that the republic of America is one of them! Believe me, I am serious. If you doubt my statement, turn to a file of the Toronto Globe, the foremost newspaper of British America, and you will discover that I correctly epitomize one of its recent editorials.

Something more substantial than this sorry stuff will be needed to keep things as they are. By its side are often printed expressions of opinion from the English press of quite a different stamp. For along with items flattering to the mission of the four delegates who have recently represented Canada in Downing street, we have testimony that proves how heartily the main body of the English Liberals favor separation. The London Economist, the mouth piece of a large and thoughtful class, declares that "the sooner we part in peace and friendship with our North American colonies, the better for us and for them." The Economist, an organ of the great free trade party of England, urges "the abandonment of the British American colonies, and their annexation to the United States." A remark of the Economist constitutes an answer to nine-tenths of the sentimentality in which our provincial writers indulge. "The population of the colonies," says the Londoner, "have not in general any great prejudice against the republican institutions. The truth is, the colonists have generally democratic ideas, it may be without fully realizing it, and they would easily reconcile themselves to the changes which would be necessary to their incorporation into the American Union." These words hit the nail on the head. Canada is already essentially democratic in everything, save in its crown-appointed Governor; so democratic that its incorporation into the American Union to-morrow would not materially disturb the operation of any part of the public machinery of the Province. Socially, too, there are no insuperable obstacles. Of British snobbishness there is more than sufficient, and it is snobbishness in its most concentrated and contemptible form. But the bulk of the people are as democratic in their habits and tastes as those on the other side of the line, and the intercourse of the two people has become so multiform and constant that neither would experience a new sensation were they henceforth made one. The consciousness of the fact that, as a community, we are dependent on the United States for our prosperity, gives birth to a degree of civility and favor which they who prate about national sentiment would fain disregard. If sentiment have anything to do with the matter, I believe that it will be found to preponderate on the side of those who insist that the union of interests which exists between the two countries should, with the least possible delay, be made also a union of nationality and government.

The frequency with which English statesmen of the Liberal party express opinions favorable to separation is another circumstance which operates powerfully here, for their sayings pass from journal to journal, stamped with the authority which loyalists attach to everything from the old country. John Bright and Goldwin Smith are no longer the only exponents of the policy of colonial emancipation. Lowe tells the House of Commons that Canadians should not only be permitted but encouraged to prepare for annexation; and Lord Bury, who, as Secretary to Sir Edmund Head, acquired an intimate knowledge of the Province, advocates immediate steps in the direction of independence, the inevitable precursor of annexation. These views are shared by many of the leading moneyed men of England. The Barings have been known for some time past to be anxious for annexation, and the grounds of their anxiety are easily discoverable by anybody acquainted with the extent and present condition of their investments in this province. They have enormous sums sunk here in one place and another, and the only hope of averting heavy losses lies in the change of provincial allegiance. At present these investments are not only unprofitable; but are altogether jeoparded, and they cannot be otherwise until Canada occupies its natural position as a member of the American Union.

Thus, then, despite the endeavors of influential journals to decry the movement, the papers of all shades of opinion unwittingly become instrumental in the diffusion of annexation ideas. The number of those who are ashamed of the unfairness and timidity that would keep out of sight—and, failing to hide, would misrepresent—the great question of the day, steadily increases. The Times of this city, a daily enjoying a large circulation, was the first to unfold the banner of independence. The Galt Reporter, which has for many years been well sustained by the finest farming district in Canada, next hoisted the standard of annexation. The London Free Press, the only live daily west of Hamilton, though fighting shy of annexation, never loses a chance of exhibiting to its readers the depressed state of provincial affairs, the hopelessness of defense, and the expediency of seeking independence, jointly guaranteed by England and the United States. Some of the admissions of this journal, conducted as it is with much tact and success, are worthy of being reproduced as confirmatory of the view which I am striving to convey to you and your readers. "That there is a class in Canada, and a pretty extensive class too, who are in favor of annexation," says the Free Press, "there is no doubt. These are to be found mostly among the mercantile community," a fact which anybody may verify by a little free talk with the merchants and storekeepers of Western Canada. Of the agriculturalists, the Free Press says: "The farming community, who enjoy practically all the benefits which annexation is held as being able to confer by means of the Reciprocity Treaty—without being subject to any of the drawbacks in the shape of taxation, are far from ripe for such a plunge." That is it exactly. The farmers will be content to go on as they are, provided the benefits of the Reciprocity Treaty be continued. But take away the treaty, deprive the farmers of the gains which admission to the American market secures—close against them the only outlet for the major part of the products of the farm—and from that instant they will be as intent upon securing annexation as the merchants, storekeepers and mechanics already are.

Another periodical, which is doing excellent service is the Trade Review of Montreal—an influential weekly professedly eschewing politics, but one which quietly and effectively demonstrates the absurdity of the talk about defense, the rottenness of the Provincial finances, and the supreme importance of maintaining close commercial relations with the United States, be the political sacrifice what it may.

Stray publications of another character begin to find their way into circulation. "A Tract for the Times, being a Few Thoughts upon a North American Nationality," is one of these—a tiny affair, having nothing in the way of talent or style to recommend it, but noticeable as a sign of the impatience with which thoughtful men regard the alternating silence and misrepresentation of the newspapers. Just now, perhaps the tract or fly sheet form is that in which the greatest amount of service may be rendered to the annexation movement, which should be discussed irrespective of the partisan considerations which newspapers in this latitude are [illegible] to consult. With the political parties as such, those of us who want annexation have little or nothing to do. We expect no aid from them, and might not like to be mixed up with party [illegible] in a movement which to be successful must commend itself to the calm judgment of the people. Therefore, I say, the most valuable form of the publication pertaining to annexation is the independent form of a circular, issued [illegible] of any sort, a pamphlet grappling with the general merits of the question intelligently and exhaustively. Something of this sort is needed. Its points are not only clear but superficially understood in many localities and I know of nothing more likely to be useful than a series of well connected tracts which should be scattered broadcast over the Province. The industrial and commercial aspects of the question might thus be dealt with the loyalty of the defense question might also be dealt with, and the misstatements to which opponents of annexation resort ought to be exposed and swept away. In Upper Canada an absurd idea [illegible] to frighten those who know nothing of the rule and economy of the States; while in Lower Canada the more ignorant are told that annexation would entail the overthrow of the religious institutions and the imposition of an authority more obnoxious to their faith and customs than that which now exists. These are samples of the misrepresentations which a little organized effort would speedily remove.

Not that any outside effort is desired or desirable. The movement for annexation has originated within the Province under the pressure of circumstances which everywhere excite apprehension, and it must be permitted to go on as a provincial movement, without interference from your side of the border. Its opponents rely not a little upon the absence of organization, and the junction of rival party leaders in the present Government. They do not seem to be aware that the influence of the old party leaders has been on the wane ever since the formation of the existing coalition, and that whenever the proper time arrives the people will take hold of the question and deal with it, whether the old leaders be favorable or not.

But though we want no active help from the United States, we have a right to ask that assistance shall not be rendered to the adversaries of annexation. We can fight our own battle without fear of the result, provided only that nothing be done against us by the authorities at Washington. It is in the power of Congress to hasten annexation or to postpone it indefinitely. Reciprocity is the lever with which you may produce either of these results. Renew the treaty and this Province will continue separate, for its people will reap the benefits of union without contributing a dollar to its cost. On the other hand, refuse to renew the treaty, or couple it with conditions in respect to manufactured goods in which colonists cannot acquiesce, and neither the Government of England nor the Government of Canada will be able long to resist the annexation movement.

This view of the question is one which the American delegates to the Detroit Convention may be properly requested to remember. I take it that those of them who are favorable to reciprocity are not favorable to annexation. On the contrary, they who oppose reciprocity on commercial grounds, belong to a class who have much to gain from annexation which would open to them a market for their manufactured goods, now practically excluded. To both we say, leave us alone. Let the decision of Congress remain; that it may yield fruit in due season. Let the one-sided treaty come to an end, that an alliance of another sort may be entered into, securing unrestrained commercial intercourse, and binding together the fortunes of the two countries with bonds not to be broken.

VIEWS OF AN OBSERVER.—A Pennsylvania Democrat, who has been spending six weeks at the South, writes from Alabama to the Public Ledger (Philadelphia) as follows:

MOBILE (Ala.), June 21, 1865.

I have come down to this part of the country with the intention of casting my lot with it for the future, and feel impelled to send you a line to tell of my impressions of the people. I have been for some six weeks in daily contact with Southern people of all political shades, and though I am a poor talker, I am a good listener, and not a very bad hand at forming conclusions from a great deal of hearing. I came to the Gulf States full of very fine theories about the necessities of educating the negro before we could extend to him the privilege of suffrage. He was ignorant; he was bigoted, he was prejudiced; he could not be trusted with the privilege of a voter until he had attained a certain standard of education. Well, sir, I was never further away from the truth in my life. I have listened by the hour to the familiar, social, unrestrained talk of Southern people; and I have been sorry to conclude, from all I have heard, that the damnable heresy of the State Rights doctrine, upon which, with imagined evils threatened to the institution of slavery, they based their acts of secession and rebellion, is as deeply rooted in their convictions as it ever was. They have failed to establish the success of their principles at the bayonet's point and the cannon's mouth, but those principles lie as near the hearts of the great mass of them as ever, and true loyalty to the Government, as constituting a principle with the mass of the people at the North, is entirely foreign to the breasts of the masses in the South. The same hostility that was openly displayed in arms exists secretly in the breasts of the Southern people, and is ready at any time to exert itself, no longer in overt acts, but in every possible pacific way, to thwart the unity and progress of the republic. On the other hand, the negro has but one principle and one affection. His principle is devotion to the Union, his affection heart-whole for the cause that has restored him to manhood. No doubts of the justice of the cause cross his mind. No cloud of casuists' rising obscure his vision. His instincts alone point out to him the path he is to tread as a free man, and point it out to him unerringly. Who so safe to trust with the ballot of a freeman as he is? Can demagogues lead him astray with arts and sophistries? I trow not. He may not know as much of book learning as his paler skinned brother, but he is less likely to be deceived in what pertains to the advancement of all members of the human family, himself included. And if you could see, as I have seen, the colored people of these Southern cities sitting at their door steps in the moonlight on hot evenings, teaching each other to spell and to count, regardless of the comments of those who passed by, you would not be slow in coming to the belief that even the supposed amount of education necessary to enable them to vote intelligently will not be long wanting. I, for one, contrary to all my previous expectations, am fully convinced that the only safety for the south is in the extension of free suffrage to the people of all colors, and I mean to throw myself into the advocacy of this cause with all my energy. Far better is the instinct that teaches loyalty to the Union than the false education that makes State Rights traitors. Shall we trust the future of our country to the instinct that invariably leads to the right or to the educated sophistry that inculcates what is false and ruinous?

We are by no means ready for a reconstruction under the domination of defeated but unconvinced traitors. We have had a terrible war, let us not cast away its fruits. Let us have military Government in the Southern States until the sentiment of true loyalty begins to be felt, or, if we must have civil governments reconstructed, let those who have every cause to love the Union not be put aside while its interests are confided to the hands of those who have been its open enemies.

TO THE DRY TORTUGAS.—The President has changed the place of confinement of Dr. Mudd, Spangler, Arnold and O'Laughlin from the Albany Penitentiary to the Dry Tortugas, a secure prison on a barren reef a few miles beyond Key West. No visitors can reach their place of confinement except by special permission of the Government, and there is absolutely no chance of escape. A more suitable spot for the incarceration of these conspirators could not have been selected, and the change will commend itself to every impartial judgment. The solemn roll of the waves of the Gulf, the silent and even ghostly air, or rather want of air, on these lifeless coral reefs, the absence of every living thing save the albatross and the shark, the blue above and the blue below, in one unvarying monotony, save the infrequent visit of the hurricane, which only adds terror to desolation, all these may fitly picture the far seaward home of those to whom the law and the testimony have meted the boon of death.—N. Y. Times, July 18th.

MURDER IN TENNESSEE.—A murder case in Gallatin (Tenn.) is exciting much attention. The only witness of the murder was a colored woman, and Judge Gould, presiding, [illegible] the Judge Shackelford claimed that the woman's testimony should be admitted, arguing first that the Government had admitted negroes to testify in many cases, especially in the court martial trial at Washington; second, that Congress had declared colored persons competent witnesses in all United States Courts; and third, that it was right in itself to receive such testimony. Judge Gould is one of the members of the bar in Tennessee and formerly Chancellor in Gallatin District. He was identified from the first with the rebellion, and was sent North for disloyalty by Andrew Johnson, while the latter was Military Governor. Judge Shackelford ruled out the witness, on the ground that State law positively forbade colored persons testifying, but said such testimony ought, in justice, to be admitted.

A SAD STORY OF TRUE LOVE.—The St. Louis Journal of July 31, has the following "o'er true tale":

A week or two ago we mentioned the circumstance of a young lady drowning herself at Venice, on the opposite side of the river, on account of disappointment in a love affair with one Andrew Funkhouser. On Saturday morning Funkhouser visited the scene of the suicide, and there, in fit of remorse, shot himself through the heart. Funkhouser was a German cigar maker, and boarded at Bohn's boarding house on Franklin avenue, between Twenty second and Twenty third streets. He had a room near by where he slept and worked. He had been a soldier in the army, and soon after obtaining his discharge, paid his addresses to Miss Elizabeth Lederer. One day, during a stroll on the bank of the Mississippi near the village of Venice, the lovers sat down under the shade of a tree, and there exchanged their vows of love. They were engaged to be married, and to them the horizon of the future was tinged with the roseate hues of hope and undying affection. They met daily and were exceedingly fond of each other. But fate, as if envious of their happiness, sent the malignant demon of doubt to plant thorns in their pathway. The course of their true love did not long run smooth. One day, about a month ago, Andrew in the excess of his happiness remarked playfully to Lizzie that he did not intend to marry her, and left her. She pondered upon his parting words and thinking he might be in earnest, was greatly depressed and became a prey to harassing doubts and suspicions. Filled with boding thoughts of evil she revisited the trysting tree on the bank of the river, near Venice and wandering along the shore, mingled her tears with the flood that flowed at her feet. Seating herself under the tree she gave vent to her feelings in reproaches against her lover, and repinings at her cruel fate. She returned to the city after a short time spent on the opposite shore, but failing to hear from Andrew she went back to Venice and in a moment of despair rushed into the water, and was swallowed up by the remorseless current.

The body of Miss Lederer was recovered, and her lover, who was almost distracted by the fatal rigors of her death, took charge of the body, purchased a lot in a cemetery, had the remains interred, and a tomb stone placed above her. He told his friends that he wished to be buried by the side of his lost Elizabeth and assured them that it would not be long before he would go to his resting place. Funkhouser was a man of about 30, but after the sad death of his betrothed he became apparently an old man, his hair turned grey and his whole aspect was changed. On Saturday morning he went over to Venice with a friend to revisit the spot where he had exchanged vows with his dead mistress. His friend asked him to take a glass of beer, but he declined, and said he had drunk all he intended. He was seen sitting under the tree on the bank of the river, with his breast bare, a pistol lying by his side, and a miniature of Miss Lederer in his hand. Not willing to intrude upon his meditations, his friend turned to leave him, and had gone a short distance when heard the explosion of the pistol. Running to the spot, he found Funkhouser weltering in blood. He had placed the muzzle of the pistol to his heart and fired. His agony was brief. In a moment he was dead. His remains were brought over to the city yesterday afternoon and buried by the side of his betrothed, as he had requested. Thus it will be seen that a little word, spoken in jest, has caused the death of two innocent and loving beings who might have lived to be happy and useful members of society. We therefore admonish all persons, especially lovers, to be serious in all things, and beware of practical jokes.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

PORTLAND, August 25th, 1865.

One of the most interesting features of the week past in a commercial point of view, has been the arrival of three large quartz mills, for the mines of Owyhee, for companies organized in New York. A large number of mills are now in the mines, or on the way there, and some of them are working night and day. A cotemporary says on this point: "It is worthy of remark that all these mills are either owned by our own people or Eastern capitalists. Thus far, San Francisco has scarcely spent a dollar with a view to aiding in the development of our mines. Whatever has been accomplished in this direction, has been owing to the industry and enterprise of our own citizens, aided by Eastern capitalists. Considering that the trade of the whole coast centers at San Francisco, we might have expected better things, but yet the fact is, that those who should have aided us have uniformly given us the cold shoulder. As it is, we are fortunate enough to be in a position to dispense with aid from that quarter. It is to Eastern capitalists we are indebted for whatever aid we have received from without, and when the golden harvest is gathered in, we shall divide our gains with those who befriended us in our days of weakness." Of the three quartz mills which passed through last week, two go to Owyhee, and the third to South Boise. All these mills fairly at work, and the world will be astonished at our yield of gold.

The steamer Active, it is thought, will be at Victoria during the next week, ready to enter upon trade with the British Provinces and Oregon. We understand the Active will run regularly to New Westminster, touching at Victoria, which will offer better advantages to the dealer in fruit and provisions here, than could be obtained did she only run to Victoria, as by this method we will be enabled to lay down a cargo at New Westminster at rates as reasonable as the California steamers can lay down a cargo from San Francisco, thus giving Portland the preference of trade, in consequence of avoiding re-shipment at Victoria.

The bulk of Oregon wool has been sent forward, through the agency of Knapp, Burrell & Co., to the Eastern market. The work of grading and baling the wool for shipment has been done in a most satisfactory manner. The bales were securely and handsomely put up, and we are of the opinion its arrival in New York will attract considerable attention.

During the week there has been quite a speculative movement in candles, in the California market, and prices have advanced from 1 to 5 cents. There are now on the way to San Francisco from domestic Atlantic ports, about 20 vessels with an aggregate burthen of 26,000 tons. So far, as specified by the manifests, they bring 97,841 boxes of candles, and other leading articles of merchandise, likely to effect this market, as follows:

	cans	bbls
Lard	4,000	410
Oil	[illegible]	10
Pork		7,164
Soap	7,157 boxes
Dried apples	4,409 ½ bbls
Hams and Bacon	7,000 tcs

Large quantities of liquors are also on the way.

Wholesale and Jobbing Prices.

PORTLAND, August 25th, 1865.

The markets afford very little of interest for the past week. There has been some considerable change in the flour market. All brands are quoted at $8 ℔ bbl to-day. There is now in the hands of agents very little of choice lots from old wheat. California extra flour is offered at $8. All we have is from new wheat. Country brands are not very abundant in the market, and prices from first hands are nominally the same as for last week. The San Francisco market [illegible] at $5 25 [illegible] superfine, and $5 75 to $6 for extra, in round lots, with a strong sale at [illegible] figures. The Sunnyside sailed for Sidney with her inward cargo from Valparaiso.

We have to note sales of small lots of new wheat from wagons, at $1 20 ℔ bushel delivered at the mill. Oats maintain previous quotations, but there is very little offering.

Bacon is firm at 27 cents. The demand is increasing, while the stock on hand is not large. Stock [illegible] said to be very scarce in the country, and a further advance is looked for. The steamer Oregon took about 200 [illegible] of hams and bacon for the Victoria market, but there was no shipment to California. The amount arriving daily from the interior is light.

Eggs are plentier, the price paid to-day to farmers are from 30 to 35 cents ℔ dozen.
